Preparatory Coursework Exception

A student may apply for a federal loan for coursework the school has documented is necessary for him to enroll in an eligible program. The courses must be part of an eligible program otherwise offered by the school, though the student does not have to be in that program. If enrolled at least half time in these prerequisite courses, you are eligible for loans for one consecutive 12-month period (not per program) beginning on the first day of the loan period. If the program you are applying to is at an institution other than Tennessee Tech, please include a statement from that institution as to whether it is a Graduate or Undergraduate program and the specific courses you are REQUIRED to take to be admitted to that program.

To be eligible under this exception, the student must be taking classes that are a PREREQUISITE for admission to an eligible program. If you are only taking them to raise your GPA in order to be admitted, you would not qualify for loans under this exception.
